A story of Lola and Grandpa Paco

CARMEN'S ORANGES

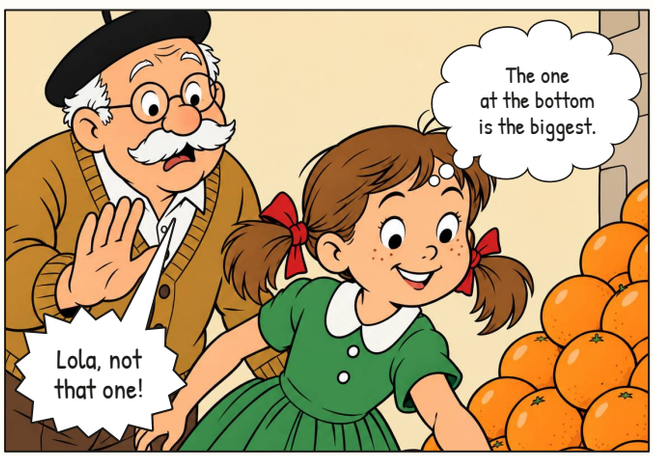

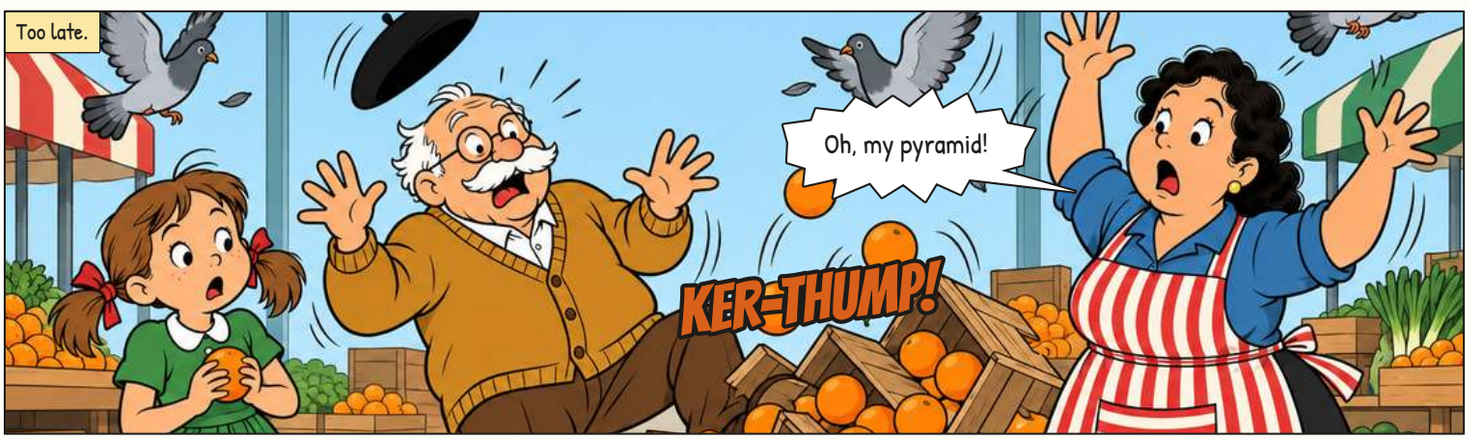

Script and lettering: the Postext Cookbook · Art: generated with diffusion models
Lettered in Patrick Hand and Bangers (SIL OFL 1.1) · Story: CC BY 4.0

On Sundays, Grandpa Paco and I went to the market.
Always at the same time. Always through the same door.

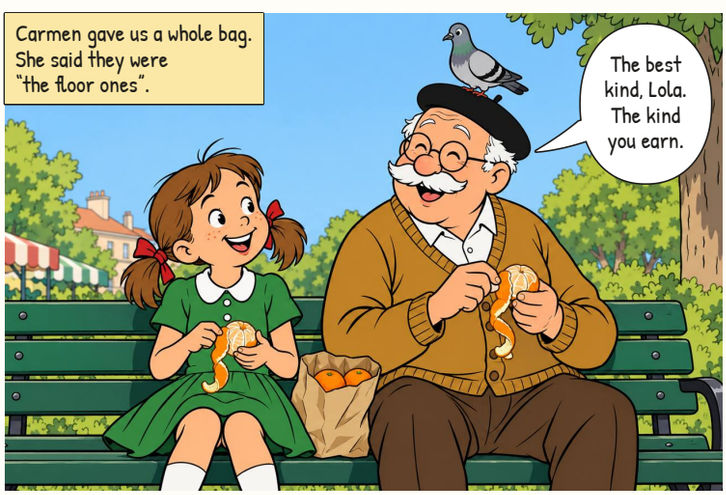

Hurry up, Grandpa, they'll all be gone!
The oranges aren't going anywhere, Lola.
Grandpa had been a baker for forty years. He walked slowly out of habit.

Carmen had the finest pyramid of oranges in all of Madrid.
Look at these, sweetheart! From Valencia, in this morning.

The one at the bottom is the biggest.
Lola, not that one!

Too late.
Oh, my pyramid!
KER-THUMP!

Sorry, Carmen!
Come on, with three of us this'll take no time.
This beret has never carried anything so good.

Carmen gave us a whole bag. She said they were "the floor ones".
The best kind, Lola. The kind you earn.